13 Respondents.

No. CV-25-01238-PHX-GMS (MTM)

ORDER

15 Pending before the Court is Petitioner Fatemeh Tabatabaeifar's Motion for 16 Preliminary Injunction (Doc. 8). For the reasons below, the Motion is granted.

17 BACKGROUND

18 Petitioner is a citizen of Iran. In February 2025, Petitioner arrived in the United 19 States through the desert, was detained, and is being held at a U.S. Immigration and 20 Customs Enforcement ("ICE") facility in Eloy, Arizona. (Doc. 8 at 3). While in custody, 21 Petitioner made various requests for asylum to ICE and United States Citizenship and 22 Immigration Services ("USCIS") officers in February and March of 2025. (Id.).

23 Rather than follow the procedure mandated by 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b) and 8 C.F.R.
24 § 208.3 for the expedited removal of unauthorized aliens who claim asylum, in mid-March 25 2025, a USCIS asylum officer assessed Petitioner under the Convention Against Torture 26 ("CAT"). (Id. at 4). On March 21, 2025, the USCIS officer determined, under the CAT, 27 that Petitioner failed to establish that it was more likely than not that she would be tortured 28 if she returned to Iran. (Id.). On April 4, 2025, upon learning about the negative CAT

1 assessment, Petitioner’s attorney requested that Petitioner’s case be referred to an 2 immigration judge for review. (Id.). On April 8, 2025, an asylum officer notified Petitioner 3 of her negative CAT assessment, and Petitioner again requested asylum and asked the 4 asylum officer to refer her case to an immigration judge. (Id. at 4).

5 On April 11, 2025, Petitioner’s attorney emailed Respondents and stated that the 6 asylum officer who notified Petitioner of her CAT assessment results failed to notify 7 Petitioner of her right to request review by an immigration judge and failed to provide 8 Petitioner the Form I-869 to request review of the decision. (Doc. 8 at 4). On April 13, 9 2025, Respondents notified Petitioner’s attorney that Petitioner was “processed under 10 Expedited Removal – Section 212(f)”¹ and “received a negative CAT determination,” and 11 that Petitioner was not entitled to an immigration judge’s review of that decision. (Id. at 12 5).

13 On April 14, 2025, Petitioner filed a Petition for Writ of Mandamus (Doc. 1) in this 14 Court, raising four separate causes of action. In her Petition for Writ of Mandamus, 15 Petitioner brings the following claims: (1) Failure of Respondents to send Petitioner’s case 16 to an immigration law judge for review in violation of 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1) and 8 C.F.R.
17 § 208.30; (2) Failure of Respondents to assess Petitioner for her asylum claim in violation 18 of the same statute and corresponding regulation—8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1) and 8 C.F.R.
19 § 208.30; (3) Violation of the Administrative Procedure Act; and (4) Violation of the Due 20 Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution. (Doc. 1 at 9-21 13). On April 16, 2025, Petitioner filed a Motion for Temporary Restraining Order and 22 Preliminary Injunction Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 65 (Doc. 8).

25 26 ¹ Section 212(f) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (“INA”) provides: “Whenever the 27 President finds that the entry of any aliens or of any class of aliens into the United States 28 would be detrimental to the interests of the United States, he may by proclamation, and for such period as he shall deem necessary, suspend the entry of all aliens or any class of aliens as immigrants or nonimmigrants, or impose on the entry of aliens any restrictions he may deem to be appropriate.” 8 U.S.C. § 1182(f).

DISCUSSION

I. Jurisdiction

This Court has jurisdiction over Petitioner's Claims. Federal district courts have original jurisdiction over cases, such as this one, that "arise under" federal law, including the Constitution. See 28 U.S.C. § 1331 ("The district courts shall have original jurisdiction of all civil actions arising under the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States.").

Respondents argue that 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(2)(A) strips this Court of jurisdiction in this case. (Doc. 28 at 11). 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(2)(A) provides that "no court shall have jurisdiction to review" the following: (1) "any individual determination or to entertain any other cause or claim arising from or relating to the implementation or operation of an order of removal pursuant to Section 1225(b)(1) of this title;" (2) "a decision by the Attorney General to invoke the provisions of [Section 1225(b)(1)];" (3) "the application of such section to individual aliens, including the determination made under Section 1225(b)(1)(B);" and (4) "procedures and policies adopted by the Attorney General to implement the provisions of Section 1225(b)(1)." 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(2)(A)(i-iv).

But § 1252(a)(2)(A) does not apply in this case. As indicated by the asylum officer's notification to Petitioner on April 13,² and as counsel for the United States candidly acknowledged at oral argument on May 9,³ Respondents do not purport to follow Section 1225(b) in this case, nor do they purport to remove Petitioner pursuant to Section 1225(b). Rather, Respondents purport to directly repatriate Petitioner based on a new procedure that the government has fashioned, not under Section 1225(b), but under Presidential Proclamation No. 10888, "Guaranteeing the States Protection Against Invasion." At oral argument on May 9, Counsel for the United States confirmed that the only reason that ² On April 13, 2025, Respondents notified Petitioner's attorney that Petitioner was "processed under Expedited Removal – Section 212(f), received a negative CAT determination." (Doc. 8 at 5).

³ At oral argument on May 9, 2025, the Court stated, "What we've got in the end is direct repatriation because the President has required it pursuant to his executive order. Is that correct?" To which Counsel for the United States responded, "Yes, that's correct." The Court then stated that such action "would not be pursuant to 1225(b)" and, instead, "is subject to a whole different procedure that results from the Presidential Proclamation." And Counsel for the United States responded that that was "correct."

Petitioner received a CAT assessment was Respondents' obligation under Convention Against Torture, not Section 1225(b). Since Petitioner was not subjected to any expedited removal proceedings pursuant to Section 1225(b),⁴ Section 1252(a)(2)(A) does not strip the court of jurisdiction over Petitioner's claims.⁵

Respondents also argue, "the Court lacks jurisdiction under 8 U.S.C. § 1252(f)(1) to grant any relief that would compel the government to operate multiple covered INA provisions in a specific manner." (Doc. 28 at 12). Section 1252(f)(1) provides that "no court (other than the Supreme Court) shall have jurisdiction or authority to enjoin or restrain the operation of [Sections 1221 to 1232 in the INA], other than with respect to the application of such provisions to an individual alien against whom proceedings under such part have been initiated." 8 U.S.C. § 1252(f)(1). But the Court is not "enjoin[ing] or restrain[ing] the operation of [Sections 1221 to 1232 in the INA]." See 8 U.S.C. § 1252(f)(1). As established above, the government is not subjecting Petitioner to any process under the INA, but rather, a new procedure under the Presidential Proclamation. Section 1252(f) does not bar an injunction on the operation of a provision that is not located in Sections 1221 to 1232 in the INA. Gonzalez v. U.S. Immigr. and Customs Enf't, 975

⁴ The Ninth Circuit has held, pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1252(a)(2)(A), that "Congress has clearly and unambiguously precluded [the courts] from asserting jurisdiction over the merits of individual expedited removal orders, even with regard to constitutional challenges to such orders." Mendoza-Linares v. Garland, 51 F.4th 1146, 1149 (9th Cir. 2022); see also Lamare v. Garland, 2023 WL 8666044, No. 20-71358, at *1 (9th Cir. Dec. 15, 2023) ("Congress has stripped [the courts] of subject matter jurisdiction to review expedited removal proceedings that involve aliens who . . . have not yet effected entry into the United States."). In those Ninth Circuit cases, the petitioner was subjected to expedited removal proceedings and expedited removal orders pursuant to Section 1225(b). District courts in the Ninth Circuit have consistently held that the jurisdictional bar under Section 1252(a)(2)(A) applies to the expedited removal proceedings that are brought under Section 1225(b). Cf. United States v. Avalos-Perez, No. 3:16-CR-02827, 2017 WL 1400018, at *3 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 19, 2017) ("As to a meaningful opportunity for judicial review, that too is foreclosed by expedited removal proceedings brought under 8 U.S.C. § 1225."); United States v. Arizmendi-Depaz, No. 18-CR-4949, 2019 WL 3945459, at *2 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 21, 2019) (holding "the INA precludes meaningful judicial review of the validity of the proceedings that result in an expedited removal order under 8 U.S.C. § 1225").

1 F.3d 788, 814 (9th Cir. 2020) (holding that “§ 1252(f)(1)’s limitations do not apply” where 2 the relevant provision “is not located in [Sections 1221 to 1232 in the INA]”). Nor does 3 Section 1252(f)(1) “prohibit an injunction simply because of collateral effects on a covered 4 provision” in the INA. Al Otro Lado v. Exec. Off. for Immigr. Rev., 120 F.4th 606, 627 5 (9th Cir. 2024). Therefore, Section 1252(f)(1) does not strip the court of jurisdiction to 6 consider the operation of the Presidential Proclamation as to Petitioner.

7 As such, the Court has jurisdiction to hear Petitioner’s claims.

8 II. Legal Standard for Injunctive Relief

9 “A party seeking injunctive relief under Rule 65 of the Federal Rules of Civil 10 Procedure must show that: (1) she is likely to succeed on the merits; (2) she is likely to 11 suffer irreparable harm in the absence of injunctive relief; (3) the balance of equities tips 12 in her favor; and (4) an injunction is in the public interest.” Patel-Hasmukhbhai v. Barr, 13 No. CV-20-01121, 2020 WL 13544980, at *2 (D. Ariz. June 8, 2020) (citing Winter v. Nat.
 14 Res. Def. Couns., Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008)). Injunctive relief is “an extraordinary and 15 drastic remedy, one that should not be granted unless the movant, by a clear showing, 16 carries the burden of persuasion.” Lopez v. Brewer, 680 F.3d 1068, 1072 (9th Cir. 2012).
 17 The movant must make “a certain threshold showing . . . on each factor.” Leiva-Perez v.
 18 Holder, 640 F.3d 962, 966 (9th Cir. 2011).

19 III. Analysis

20 Petitioner seeks a preliminary injunction “enjoining and prohibiting [Respondents], 21 their agents, employees, and assigns from executing or enforcing any order of removal or 22 deportation of [Petitioner], and from taking any action to effectuate her removal from the 23 United States, until such time as the Immigration Judge has issued a final decision on her 24 case.” (Doc. 8 at 11).

25 a. Likelihood of Success

26 The Court first considers whether Petitioner is likely to succeed on the merits of her 27 claims. In her Petition for Writ of Mandamus, Petitioner brings the following claims: (1) 28 Failure of Respondents to send Petitioner’s case to an immigration law judge for review in

1 violation of 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1) and 8 C.F.R. § 208.30; (2) Failure of Respondents to 2 assess Petitioner for her asylum claim in violation of the same statute and corresponding 3 regulation—8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1) and 8 C.F.R. § 208.30; (3) Violation of the 4 Administrative Procedure Act; and (4) Violation of the Due Process Clause of the Fifth 5 Amendment to the United States Constitution. (Doc. 1 at 9-13).

6 Mandamus is an extraordinary remedy and is available to compel a federal official 7 to perform a duty only if: “(1) the individual's claim is clear and certain; (2) the official's 8 duty is ‘ministerial and so plainly prescribed as to be free from doubt;’ and (3) no other 9 adequate remedy is available.” Azurin v. Von Raab, 803 F.2d 993, 995 (9th Cir. 1986)
 10 (quoting Fallini v. Hodel, 783 F.2d 1343, 1345 (9th Cir. 1986)).

11 Petitioner’s first two claims, under 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1) and 8 C.F.R. § 208.30, 12 involve the alleged unlawful failure of Respondents to provide Petitioner with a credible 13 fear determination and, if negative, refer Petitioner’s asylum claim to an immigration judge 14 for review. (Doc. 1 at 9-12). 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(A)(i) provides that an immigration 15 officer may remove without further hearing an alien who is “arriving in the United States” 16 and found “inadmissible under Section 1182(a)(6)(C) or 1182(a)(7)” unless “the alien 17 indicates . . . an intention to apply for asylum under Section 1158.” “An asylum officer 18 shall conduct interviews” of such aliens. 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(i). “If the officer 19 determines at the time of the interview that an alien has a credible fear of persecution . . .
 20 the alien shall be detained for further consideration of the application for asylum.” 8 U.S.C.
 21 § 1225(b)(1)(B)(ii).⁶ If “the officer determines that an alien does not have a credible fear 22 of persecution, the officer shall order the alien removed from the United States without 23 further hearing or review” unless the alien requests “prompt review by an immigration 24 judge” of the determination, in which case, such “review shall include an opportunity for 25 the alien to be heard and questioned by an immigration judge either in person or by 26 telephonic or video connection.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(iii)(I-III). The immigration

27 ⁶ At oral argument on May 9, the government conceded that an assessment under the 28 Convention Against Torture was not identical to the credible fear determination under the 8 U.S.C § 1225(b)(1), which evaluates additional factors, such as whether an alien will face persecution upon her return.

1 judge's review "shall be concluded as expeditiously as possible, to the maximum extent 2 practicable within 24 hours, but in no case later than 7 days after the date of the 3 determination." 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(iii)(III). The corresponding regulation, 8 C.F.R.
 4 § 208.30, provides that an "asylum officer shall inquire whether the alien wishes to have 5 an immigration judge review the negative [credible fear] decision, which shall include an 6 opportunity for the alien to be heard and questioned by the immigration judge." C.F.R.
 7 § 208.30(g)(1). Petitioner argues that Respondents' "failure to conduct an interview to 8 make a credible fear determination or to refer [Petitioner] to an immigration judge, despite 9 her multiple requests, violates federal regulations under 8 C.F.R. § 208.30 and [federal 10 statute under] 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(iii)(III)." (Doc. 8 at 6).

11 As to Petitioner's first two claims, Respondents argue that Petitioner cannot 12 establish a likelihood of success because "the Presidential Proclamation bars these claims 13 and was a valid exercise of the President's authority under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(f) and 1185(a) 14 and Article II of the Constitution." (Doc. 28 at 9). Respondents are incorrect.

15 On January 20, 2025, President Donald Trump issued Proclamation 10888, 16 "Guaranteeing the States Protection Against Invasion." In that Proclamation, the President 17 declared that the entry of (1) "any alien who fails, before entering the United States, to 18 provide Federal officials with sufficient medical information and reliable criminal history 19 and background information" and (2) "aliens engaged in the invasion across the southern 20 border" are "detrimental to the interests of the United States."⁷ 90 Fed. Reg. at 8335. The 21 President thus directed "that entry into the United States of such aliens be suspended." Id.
 22 In addition to suspending entry of such aliens, the President "restrict[ed] their access to 23 provisions of the INA that would permit their continued presence in the United States, 24 including, but not limited to, section 208 of the INA, 8 U.S.C. § 1158," id., which provides 25 the right to claim asylum.

26 In doing so, the President purportedly invoked his authority under 8 U.S.C. §§

27 28 ⁷ The Proclamation does not distinguish between aliens who arrive at a port of entry seeking lawful entry into the United States and aliens who come into the United States intentionally evading inspection at a port of entry.

1 1182(f) and 1185(a). Section 1182(f) of the INA provides: “Whenever the President finds 2 that the entry of any aliens or of any class of aliens into the United States would be 3 detrimental to the interests of the United States, he may by proclamation, and for such 4 period as he shall deem necessary, suspend the entry of all aliens or any class of aliens as 5 immigrants or nonimmigrants, or impose on the entry of aliens any restrictions he may 6 deem to be appropriate.” 8 U.S.C. § 1182(f). The presidential power under Section 1185(a) 7 “substantially overlaps” with § 1182(f). Trump v. Hawaii, 585 U.S. 667, n.1 (2018); see 8 also 8 U.S.C. § 1185(a) (“Unless otherwise ordered by the President, it shall be unlawful .
 9 . . . for any alien to . . . enter the United States except under such reasonable rules, 10 regulations, and orders, and subject to such limitations and exceptions as the President may 11 prescribe.”). Congress has thus “delegated to the President authority to suspend or restrict 12 the entry of aliens in certain circumstances.” Hawaii, 585 U.S. at 683. “Lawful entry 13 refers to an entry involving inspection and admission by an immigration officer.” Lezama- 14 Garcia v. Holder, 666 F.3d 518, 528 (9th Cir. 2011). Where a person effects entry, the 15 Supreme Court “has recognized additional rights and privileges not extended to those who 16 are merely on the threshold of initial entry.” Leng May Ma v. Barber, 357 U.S. 185, 187 17 (1958); see also Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678, 693 (2001) (“Once an alien enters the 18 country, the legal circumstance changes.”).

19 Section 1182(f) “grants the President broad discretion to suspend entry of aliens into 20 the United States.” Hawaii, 585 U.S. at 683-84. “The sole prerequisite to the President’s 21 exercise of this power is a finding that the entry of aliens ‘would be detrimental to the 22 interests of the United States.’” East Bay Sanctuary Covenant v. Trump, 932 F.3d 742, 23 760 (9th Cir. 2018) (quoting Hawaii, 585 U.S. at 685).

24 Although broad, the scope of the delegated power under Section 1182(f) “is not 25 limitless.” Doe #1 v. Trump, 957 F.3d 1050, 1066 (9th Cir. 2020). For “the President may 26 not override particular provisions of the INA through the power granted to him in § 27 1182(f).” East Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 932 F.3d at 760. In Trump v. Hawaii, the 28 Supreme Court held that Section 1182(f) “does not give the President authority to

1 countermand Congress’s considered policy judgments” and “does not allow the President
 2 to expressly override particular provisions of the INA.” 585 U.S. at 688-91 (upholding a 3 presidential proclamation where “plaintiffs [did] not point to any contradiction with 4 another provision of the INA” so “the President [had] not exceeded his authority under 5 Section 1182(f)”; see also Pacito v. Trump, No. 2:25-cv-255, 2025 WL 655075, at *10 6 (W.D. Wash. Feb. 28, 2025) (holding that Trump v. Hawaii “establishes the principle that 7 the President’s invocation of Section 1182(f) becomes unlawful and ultra vires when it 8 overrides or conflicts with the INA’s statutory provisions”).

9 Additionally, the President’s power under § 1182(f) is limited to only the power to 10 restrict entry into the United States. See East Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 932 F.3d at 773.
 11 Congress has authorized the President to “suspend . . . entry” and to “impose on the entry 12 of aliens any restrictions he may deem appropriate.” 8 U.S.C. § 1182(f). That express 13 delegation of power to restrict entry makes clear that Congress did not delegate to the 14 President any other power in § 1182(f). Nat’l Fed’n of Indep. Bus. v. Sebelius, 567 U.S.
 15 519, 534 (2012) (“The enumeration of powers is also a limitation of powers, because the 16 enumeration presupposes something not enumerated.”); see also City of Tulsa, Okl. V.
 17 Midland Valley R. Co., 168 F.2d 252, 254 (10th Cir. 1948) (“[T]he enumeration of specific 18 powers operates to exclude those not enumerated.”). Moreover, in delegating to the 19 President the power to restrict the entry of aliens under Section 1182(f), “Congress did not 20 delegate authority to eviscerate portions of the statute in which the Congressional 21 delegation of power was made.” Nat’l Ass’n of Mfr. v. U.S. Dep’t of Homeland Sec., 491 22 F.Supp.3d 549, 564 (N.D. Cal. 2020).

23 Along with specifying the terms of entry into the United States, the INA addresses 24 a number of topics, including the terms on which any alien may request asylum. “Asylum 25 is a concept distinct from admission,⁸ which permits the executive branch—in its 26 ⁸ “The distinction between an alien who has effected an entry into the United States and 27 one who has never entered runs throughout immigration law.” Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 693; 28 see also Leng May Ma, 357 U.S. at 187 (“[O]ur immigration laws have long made a distinction between those aliens who have come to our shores seeking admission . . . and those who are within the United States after an entry.”). “An alien ‘comes to’ the United States when the alien crosses the border into the United States regardless of whether he or

1 discretion—to provide protection to aliens who meet the international definition of 2 refugees.” East Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 932 F.3d at 757. “Our asylum law has its roots
 3 in the 1951 Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees, July 28, 1951, 189 U.N.T.S.
 4 150 (“Convention”), and the 1967 Protocol Relating to the Status of Refugees, Jan. 31, 5 1967, 19 U.S.T. 6223, 606 U.N.T.S. 267 (“Protocol”) . . . Congress enacted the Refugee 6 Act of 1980 . . . to bring the INA into conformity with the United State’s obligations under 7 the Convention and Protocol.” Id.

8 Pursuant to Section 1158(a)(1) of the INA, Congress has provided: “Any alien who 9 is physically present in the United States or who arrives in the United States (whether or 10 not at a designated port of arrival . . .), irrespective of such alien’s status, may apply for 11 asylum.” 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1). “By definition, asylum concerns those physically present 12 in the United States.” East Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 932 F.3d at 773. The Supreme Court 13 has held that those physically present in the United States have “those rights regarding 14 admission that Congress has provided by statute,” including the right to claim asylum.
 15 Dep’t of Homeland Sec. v. Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. 103, 140 (2020).

16 In East Bay Sanctuary Covenant v. Trump, the Ninth Circuit confronted a 17 proclamation that was purportedly issued under the President’s § 1182(f) authority and 18

 19 she is under official restraint.” U.S. v. Munoz, 412 F.3d 1043, 1049 (9th Cir. 2005). Mere 20 crossing the border or physical presence in the United States does not constitute entry. See 21 Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 114, 140 (2020) (holding that alien who “crossed the southern 22 border without inspection or entry document” cannot be said to have “effected an entry”); 23 see also Kaplan v. Tod, 267 U.S. 228, 230 (1925) (holding that, despite nine years of 24 physical presence in the United States, an alien “was still in theory of law at the boundary 25 line and had gained no foothold in the United States”). And “although aliens seeking 26 admission into the United States may physically be allowed within its borders pending a 27 determination of admissibility, such aliens are legally considered to be detained at the 28 border and hence as never having effected entry into this country.” Alvarez-Garcia v.
Ashcroft, 378 F.3d 1094, 1097 (9th Cir. 2004); see also Leng May Ma, 357 U.S. at 188 (“[T]he detention of an alien in custody pending determination of [their] admissibility does not legally constitute an entry though the alien is physically within the United States.”).
 Because “[l]awful entry refers to an entry involving inspection and admission by an immigration officer.” Lezama-Garcia, 666 F.3d at 528. Where a person effects entry, the Supreme Court “has recognized additional rights and privileges not extended to those who are merely on the threshold of initial entry.” Leng May Ma, 357 U.S. at 187; see also Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 693 (“[O]nce an alien enters the country, the legal circumstance changes.”). But a person who has crossed the border and is merely physically present in the United States “has only those rights regarding admission that Congress has provided by statute.” See Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 140.

1 that, in combination with a new regulation issued by the Attorney General, made “asylum 2 unavailable to any alien who seeks refuge in the United States if she entered the country 3 from Mexico outside a lawful port of entry.” 932 F.3d at 755. The Ninth Circuit held that 4 such action is not a valid “exercise of the President’s authority under § 1182(f) because it 5 does not concern the suspension of entry or otherwise ‘impose on the entry of aliens . . .
 6 restrictions [the President] deem[s] to be appropriate.’” Id. at 773 (quoting 8 U.S.C. § 7 1182(f)).

8 Here, the Proclamation at issue suspends the entry of certain aliens based on a 9 finding that the entry of such aliens would be “detrimental to the interests of the United 10 States.” 90 Fed. Reg. at 8335. But, in addition to suspending the entry of certain aliens, 11 the Proclamation “restrict[s] their access to provisions of the INA that would permit their 12 continued presence in the United States.” Id. Thus, in addition to suspending the entry of 13 certain aliens and, resultingly, suspending their access to the “additional rights and 14 privileges” extended to those who effect entry, see Leng May Ma, 357 U.S. at 187, the 15 Proclamation seeks to restrict their “rights regarding admission that Congress provided by 16 statute” and that the Supreme Court held are available to anyone who crosses the border 17 into the United States, whether or not through lawful entry. See Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S.
 18 at 140.

19 The Supreme Court has made clear that “the President may not override particular 20 provisions of the INA through the power granted to him in § 1182(f).” East Bay Sanctuary 21 Covenant, 932 F.3d at 760. By “restricting” certain aliens from accessing the “provisions 22 of the INA . . . including, but not limited to [Section] 1158,” 90 Fed. Reg. at 8335, the 23 President, through the express terms of the Proclamation, unlawfully “override[s] 24 particular provisions of the INA.” See Hawaii, 585 U.S. at 689; Nat’l Ass’n of Mfr., 491 25 F.Supp.3d at 566 (holding at the preliminary injunction stage “that the issuance of [a 26 presidential proclamation pursuant to Section 1182(f)] is invalid based on the finding that 27 it unlawfully eviscerates portions of the INA”).

28 And, similar to the proclamation in East Bay Sanctuary Covenant, this

1 Proclamation’s restriction on “access to provisions of the INA that would permit their 2 continued presence in the United States,” 90 Fed. Reg. at 8335, is not a valid “exercise of 3 the President’s authority under § 1182(f) because it does not concern the suspension of 4 entry or otherwise ‘impose on the entry of aliens . . . restrictions [the President] deem[s] to 5 be appropriate.’” See 932 F.3d at 773 (quoting 8 U.S.C. § 1182(f)). The plain language of 6 Section 1182(f) does not mention or reference asylum, much less delegate any authority to 7 restrict access to asylum, as provided by Congress in Section 1158(a)(1). By granting the 8 President broad power to restrict entry into the United States, Congress did not grant the 9 President any power to restrict an alien’s right to request asylum. Because, in delegating 10 to the President the power to restrict the entry of aliens under Section 1182(f), “Congress 11 did not delegate authority to eviscerate portions of the statute in which the Congressional 12 delegation of power was made.” Nat’l Ass’n of Mfr., 491 F.Supp.3d at 564.

13 Though never granted entry to the United States, Petitioner “is physically present in 14 the United States.” See 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1). Pursuant to Section 1158(a)(1), regardless 15 of “whether or not [she arrived] at a designated port of arrival,” and “irrespective of [her 16 alien] status,” Congress has provided that Petitioner “may apply for asylum in accordance 17 with” Section 1158 and, where applicable, Section 1225(b). See id. Section 1225(b) 18 applies to “applicants for admission,” such as Petitioner, who are “present in the United 19 States,” but have “not been admitted.” 8 U.S.C. § 1225(a)(1). Section 1225(b) “provides 20 that asylum seekers shall be detained pending a final determination of credible fear of 21 persecution and, if found not to have such a fear, until removed.” Rodriguez v. Robbins, 22 804 F.3d 1060, 1081 (9th Cir. 2015) (quoting 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(iii)(IV)). Since 23 Petitioner is physically present in the United States, she has such “rights regarding 24 admission that Congress has provided by statute.” See Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 105.
 25 The “President may not override [those] particular provisions of the INA through the power 26 granted to him in § 1182(f).” See East Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 932 F.3d at 760.
 27 Petitioner, therefore, demonstrates a likelihood that the Presidential Proclamation is not a 28 valid exercise of the President’s statutory authority under Sections 1182(f) and 1185(a).

1 Nor is it likely that the Proclamation is a valid exercise of the President's 2 constitutional authority under Articles II and IV of the Constitution. "The exclusion of 3 aliens . . . is inherent in the executive power to control the foreign affairs of the nation."
 4 U.S. ex rel. Knauff v. Shaughnessy, 338 U.S. 537, 542 (1950). And "it is not the judicial 5 role . . . to probe and test the justifications of immigration policies." Hawaii, 585 U.S. at 6 704 (citations omitted). Courts "may nevertheless review the political branches' actions to 7 determine whether they exceed the constitutional or statutory scope of their authority." See 8 East Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 932 F.3d at 756. Although Article II grants the President 9 executive power, the legislative power and the power to "establish an uniform Rule of 10 Naturalization" belongs to Congress. See U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 4. "The power of 11 executing the laws . . . does not include a power to revise clear statutory terms that turn out 12 not to work in practice." East Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 932 F.3d at 774 (quoting Util.
 13 Air Regul. Grp. v. EPA, 573 U.S. 302, 327 (2014)). And when, as here, "the President 14 takes measures incompatible with the expressed or implied will of Congress, his power is 15 at its lowest ebb, for then he can rely only upon his own constitutional powers minus any 16 constitutional powers of Congress over the matter." Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v.
 17 Sawyer, 343 U.S. 579, 637 (1952) (Jackson, J., concurring). "Courts can sustain exclusive 18 Presidential control in such a case only by disabling the Congress from acting upon the 19 subject." Id. at 637-38. It is thus likely that the Proclamation is not a valid exercise of the 20 President's authority under Article II of the Constitution.

21 It is also likely that the Proclamation is not a valid exercise of the President's 22 authority under Article IV, Section 4 of the Constitution. That section states, "The United 23 States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a Republican Form of Government, and 24 shall protect each of them against Invasion." U.S. Const. art. IV, § 4. The Proclamation 25 provides that, pursuant to the Invasion Clause, the President "determined that the current 26 situation at the southern border qualifies as an invasion," and therefore suspended the entry 27 of certain aliens "engaged in the invasion." 90 Fed. Reg. at 8334-35.

28 In State of California v. United States, the state of California asked the court to 1 determine that the United States had “violated its obligations to protect the State from 2 invasion and to guarantee it a republican form of government under the Invasion and 3 Guarantee Clauses of Article IV of the United States Constitution by failing to stop the 4 intrusion of illegal aliens across the State’s borders.” 104 F.3d 1086, 1090 (9th Cir. 1997).

 5 The state of California asked the court to determine that the United States had been 6 “invaded” when neither the executive nor legislative branch had made such a 7 determination. Id. at 1091. The Ninth Circuit noted that “the issue of protection of the 8 States from invasion implicates foreign policy concerns which have been constitutionally 9 committed to the political branches.” Id. at 1091. Because the protection sought by 10 California would have required the court “to determine that the United States ha[d] been 11 ‘invaded’ when the political branches ha[d] made no such determination,” the claim was 12 nonjusticiable. Id.

13 The present case, however, does not arise in the context of any state asserting that 14 the United States violated its guarantee to a republican form of government by failing to 15 protect against an invasion. Nor does this case arise in the absence of a determination of 16 an “invasion” by another political branch. Instead, this case arises in the context of a 17 private litigant asserting rights authorized by an act of Congress which the President seeks 18 to unilaterally cancel by claiming that an invasion has occurred under Article IV. Under 19 such circumstances, the judiciary may review whether the President’s assumption of the 20 authority to cancel legislative rights is correct. See East Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 932 F.3d 21 at 773 (invalidating a presidential proclamation to the extent it nullified the right to apply 22 for asylum). As the Ninth Circuit recently observed in East Bay Sanctuary Covenant:

23 “‘[I]f there is a separation-of-powers concern here, it is between the President 24 and Congress, a boundary that we are sometimes called upon to enforce.
 25 (citations omitted). Here, the Executive has attempted an end-run around 26 Congress . . . The Proclamation attempts . . . [to do] indirectly what the 27 Executive cannot do directly: amend the INA. Just as we may not, as we are 28 often reminded, ‘legislate from the bench,’ neither may the Executive legislate from the Oval Office.”

East Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 932 F.3d at 774. Nor is there any concern that, in this

1 context, the Court is unable to evaluate the authority claimed by the President through the 2 Invasion Clause. “While [construing the term ‘invasion’] may be no light undertaking, it 3 is a judicial one.” J.G.G. v. Trump, No. 25-766, 2025 WL 890401, at *10 (D.D.C. Mar.
 4 24, 2025); see also United States v. Texas, 719 F.Supp.3d 640, at 680-85 (W.D. Texas 5 2024) (undertaking a textual and historical analysis to determine whether immigration 6 constitutes an invasion as described in the U.S. Constitution).

7 Irrespective of entry, Petitioner requests an asylum claim because of the express 8 authorization of Congress. See 8. U.S.C. § 1158. Because Congress has expressly 9 authorized anyone physically present in the United States, including Petitioner, to make an 10 asylum claim, it seems difficult to conclude that Petitioner is an “invader” under Article 11 IV. Moreover, courts, including the State of California court, agree that the Invasion 12 Clause aims to protect a state from “foreign hostility” and “was not intended to be used as 13 urged by California” to address an influx of unauthorized aliens. State of Cal., 104 F.3d at 14 1091; see also Padavan v. U.S., 82 F.3d at 23, 28 (“In order for a state to be afforded the 15 protections of the Invasion Clause, it must be exposed to armed hostility from another 16 political entity, such as another state or foreign country that is intending to overthrow the 17 state’s government.”); see also Texas, 719 F.Supp.3d at 685 (“In light of the Constitution’s 18 structure and contemporary use of ‘invasion,’ the original public meaning of the term 19 would have referred to an exceptionally dangerous incursion of organized armed 20 hostiles.”).

21 Further, although the Executive retains considerable power with regard to 22 immigration, there is a “constitutional commitment of the issue to [another] coordinate 23 political department.” See Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, 217 (1962). The Constitution 24 entrusted exclusively to Congress the power to make immigration laws. See Galvan v.
 25 Press, 347 U.S. 522, 531 (1954) (“[T]he formulation of [immigration] policies is entrusted 26 exclusively to Congress.”); see also East Bay Sanctuary Covenant, 932 F.3d at 755 27 (“Congress is vested with the principal power to control the nation’s borders. This power 28 follows naturally from its powers to establish a uniform [R]ule of Naturalization.”). There

1 is no “textually demonstrable constitutional commitment” of the issue of immigration to 2 the executive branch. See Baker, 369 U.S. at 217. The only “constitutional commitment” 3 for the President to rely on to declare an invasion involves the Invasion Clause itself, which 4 states only that “[t]he United States shall . . . protect [every state] against Invasion.” U.S.
 5 Const. art. IV, § 4.

6 In this case, it thus seems likely that the issue of whether the circumstances 7 constitute an invasion within the meaning of the Constitution is a justiciable issue, and it
 8 also seems likely that the Proclamation is not a valid exercise of the President’s authority 9 under Article IV. The Proclamation, therefore, likely lacks any statutory or constitutional 10 authority and, resultingly, does not prevent Petitioner from pursuing a final determination 11 on her asylum claim.

12 So, as to Petitioner’s first two claims, Petitioner provides evidence that she made 13 several requests for asylum, and she demanded a credible fear determination and sought an 14 immigration judge’s review of her asylum claim, but Respondents have refused to provide 15 her with a credible fear determination and have refused to refer her case to an immigration 16 judge. (Doc. 8 at 4-5). Petitioner cites multiple exhibits to show that she requested an 17 immigration judge’s review of her case pursuant to 8 C.F.R. § 208.30 and 8 U.S.C. § 18 1225(b)(1)(B)(iii)(III). (Doc. 1 at 8). Petitioner argues that Respondents’ “failure to 19 conduct an interview to make a credible fear determination or to refer [Petitioner] to an 20 immigration judge, despite her multiple requests, violates federal regulations under 8 21 C.F.R. § 208.30 and [federal statute under] 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(iii)(III).” (Id. at 6).

22 8 C.F.R. § 208.30 provides that:

 24 “If an alien is found not to have a credible fear of persecution 25 or torture, the asylum officer shall provide the alien with a 26 written notice of decision and issue the alien a record of the 27 credible fear determination, including copies of the asylum 28 officer’s notes, the summary of the material facts, and other materials upon which the determination was based. The asylum officer shall inquire whether the alien wishes to have an immigration judge review the negative decision, which shall

1 include an opportunity for the alien to be heard and questioned
2 by the immigration judge.”

3 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(iii)(III) provides that:

5 “The Attorney General shall provide by regulation and upon 6 the alien’s request for prompt review by an immigration judge 7 of a determination under subclause (I) that the alien does not 8 have a credible fear of persecution. Such review shall include 9 an opportunity for the alien to be heard and questioned by the 10 immigration judge, either in person or by telephonic or video 11 connection.”

12 Given the unambiguous language of 8 C.F.R. § 208.30 and 8 U.S.C.
13 § 1225(b)(1)(B)(iii)(III) and the evidence reflecting Petitioner’s unambiguous requests for 14 referral for a credible fear determination, Petitioner has demonstrated her “claim is clear 15 and certain.” See Azurin, 803 F.2d at 995. Under 8 C.F.R. § 208.30 and 8 U.S.C.
16 § 1225(b)(1)(B)(iii)(III), Respondent’s “duty is ministerial and so plainly prescribed as to 17 be free from doubt.” See id. Aside from referring Petitioner’s case to an immigration judge 18 for review, “no other adequate remedy is available,” see id., as counsel for United States 19 has stated during oral argument on April 30, 2025, that no additional procedural steps need 20 occur before Petitioner’s deportation.

21 Therefore, Petitioner has demonstrated a likelihood of success on the merits for her 22 first two claims. Since Petitioner has demonstrated a likelihood of success on the merits 23 for her first two claims, the Court need not consider Petitioner’s third and fourth claims in 24 this Motion.⁹

25 b. Irreparable Harm

26 The Court next considers whether Petitioner is likely to suffer irreparable harm in 27 the absence of injunctive relief. Petitioner has sufficiently established that she is likely to 28 ⁹ To the extent, however, that Petitioner brings a constitutional due process claim in Count IV, Petitioner seems unlikely to succeed on the merits in light of the caselaw regarding whether arriving aliens have constitutional rights. See Thuraissigiam, 591 U.S. at 138 (rejecting the notion that an arriving alien has a “constitutional right to expedited removal proceedings that conformed to the dictates of due process.”). “As an arriving immigrant caught at the border, [Petitioner] has no constitutional rights regarding [her] application’ for asylum.” See Mendoza-Linares, 51 F.4th at 1148.

1 suffer irreparable harm in the absence of injunctive relief because “her removal could occur
 2 at any time, rendering her legal claims moot and placing her in immediate danger.” (Doc.
 3 8 at 8). “[A] noncitizen must show that there is a reason specific to his or her case . . . that 4 removal would inflict irreparable harm—for example, that removal would effectively 5 prevent her from pursuing her petition for review.” Leiva-Perez, 640 F.3d at 969. In 6 communications between Petitioner’s attorney and Respondents, ICE Deportation Officer 7 Shawn Napolitano wrote that Petitioner was “being processed as an Expedited Removal 8 under INA 212(f),” (Doc. 1-4 at 4), indicating Respondents’ intent to remove Petitioner 9 from the United States, possibly before this Court can review her petition. If Respondents 10 were to deport Petitioner, Petitioner would no longer be able to pursue the adjudication of 11 her asylum claim, which “would effectively prevent her from pursuing her petition for 12 review.” See Leiva-Perez, 640 F.3d at 969. Indeed, at the oral argument on April 30, 13 counsel for the United States asserted that Petitioner’s deportation may proceed at any time 14 as no additional procedural steps need occur. As Petitioner has shown that Respondents 15 may deport her imminently, and her deportation would prevent her from pursuing her 16 asylum claim, Petitioner has sufficiently shown a likelihood of irreparable harm. See Patel- 17 Hasmukhbhai v. Barr, No. CV-20-01121, 2020 WL 13544980, at *3 (D. Ariz. June 8, 18 2020) (“Because removal would deprive Petitioner of the relief she seeks—asylum in the 19 United States—she has shown that it is probable that she would suffer irreparable harm 20 absent a stay.”); see also Ali v. Ashcroft, No. C02-2304P, 2002 WL 35650203, at *1 (W.D.
 21 Wash. Nov. 14, 2002) (“Petitioners face an immediate risk of irreparable harm, as 22 Respondents have told Petitioners that they are to be removed to Somalia imminently.”).

23 c. Balance of Equities and Public Interest

24 The Court next considers whether the balance of equities tips in Petitioner’s favor 25 and whether injunctive relief is in the public interest. These “third and fourth factors . . .
 26 merge . . . where the government is the opposing party.” Leiva-Perez, 640 F.3d at 970.
 27 Courts “consider the public interest in preventing aliens from being wrongfully removed, 28 particularly to countries where they are likely to face substantial harm,” but also consider

1 the “public interest in prompt execution of removal orders, which may be heightened in 2 certain circumstances, such as those involving particularly dangerous noncitizens.” Id.
 3 (citing Andrieu v. Ashcroft, 253 F.3d 477, 484 (9th Cir. 2001)). The Court must consider 4 whether the public interest favors the petitioner. Fund for Animals, Inc. v. Lujan, 962 F.2d 5 1391, 1400 (9th Cir. 1992).

6 As discussed above, in the absence of a preliminary injunction, Petitioner risks 7 removal from the United States to a country in which Petitioner asserts that she is likely to 8 be tortured or otherwise persecuted. (See Doc. 8 at 8-9). There is no evidence in the record 9 that suggests Petitioner poses a threat to the public. Further, “the public has a strong 10 interest in ensuring that the nation’s immigration laws are robustly—and fairly—11 enforced.” Inland Empire—Immigrant Youth Collective v. Nielsen, No. EDCV 17-2048, 12 2018 WL 1061408, at *21 (C.D. Cal. Feb. 26, 2018). Thus, the equities tip in Petitioner’s 13 favor and injunctive relief is in the public’s interest.

14 d. Bond

15 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 65(c) provides that a court may issue a preliminary 16 injunction “only if the movant gives security in an amount that the court considers proper 17 to pay the costs and damages sustained by any party found to have been wrongfully 18 enjoined or restrained.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(c). A district court “may dispense with the 19 filing of a bond when it concludes there is no realistic likelihood of harm to the defendant 20 from enjoining his or her conduct.” Johnson v. Couturier, 572 F.3d 1067, 1086 (9th Cir.
 21 2009). Here, considering the limited scope of the injunction, Respondents face no realistic 22 harm from the Court enjoining Petitioner’s removal prior to a complete assessment of 23 Petitioner’s asylum claim in accordance with the law. As such, no bond is necessary in 24 this case.

25 e. Conclusion

26 At this stage of the proceedings, Petitioner has demonstrated that she has a 27 likelihood of success on the merits for her mandamus claims, irreparable harm is probable 28 absent a preliminary injunction, the balance of hardships tips in her favor, and injunctive

1 relief is in the public's interest. Accordingly, Petitioner's Motion for a Preliminary 2 Injunction (Doc. 8) is granted as to Petitioner's request for a preliminary injunction 3 "enjoining and prohibiting [Respondents], their agents, employees, and assigns from 4 executing or enforcing any order of removal or deportation of [Petitioner], and from taking 5 any action to effectuate her removal from the United States, until such time as the 6 Immigration Judge has issued a final decision on her case." (Doc. 8 at 11).

7 In Petitioner's Reply, Petitioner requests for the first time a nationwide injunction 8 "to enjoin the application of January 20, 2025 Proclamation 10888 for individuals who are 9 present in the United States territory seeking asylum." (Doc. 33 at 27). A nationwide 10 injunction can be appropriate in the immigration law context. See East Bay Sanctuary 11 Covenant, 932 F.3d at 779 ("In immigration matters, we have consistently recognized the 12 authority of district courts to enjoin unlawful policies on a universal basis."). Since 13 Petitioner raised her request for a nationwide injunction for the first time in her Reply and 14 Respondents have not had an opportunity to brief the issue, however, the Court does not 15 rule on Petitioner's request for a nationwide injunction at this time. Petitioner may renew 16 her request for a nationwide injunction in a subsequent motion and allow Respondents an 17 opportunity to brief the issue, and only in that event would the Court decide whether to 18 grant a broader injunction.

19 IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED that Petitioner's Motion for a Preliminary 20 Injunction (Doc. 8) is GRANTED.

21 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED Respondents, their agents and assigns are enjoined 22 from removing Petitioner from the United States prior to a complete assessment of her 23 asylum claim, including a credible fear determination and an immigration judge's review, 24 in accordance with 8 C.F.R. § 208.30 and 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(1)(B)(iii)(III).
